

Happy family - are you protected?

All-round protection for your family with these insurance policies.

Savings and life insurance

- How can you as a family guarantee your financial security if you lose your principal earner? What provision is available in the event of disability or death of the spouse? A family should also think seriously about what will happen if it comes to the worst – after all, it's part of life. Life insurance is always advisable for both parents, even if just one of them is working. A Pillar 3a solution can also be used to repay a mortgage.

Health insurance

- Whether it's the numerous children's diseases, vaccinations or the frequent check-ups for the child – mandatory basic insurance covers all these costs. At the latest, a child must be insured by the time it is three months old. It is advisable to look into the choice of basic insurance before the baby is born.

Supplementary health insurance

- Whether it's an emergency abroad, complementary medicine or correction of misaligned teeth – the costs can be covered through supplementary insurance. It is therefore worthwhile to register your child for supplementary insurance at an early stage.

Personal liability

- Children are discovering the world around them but unfortunately this can lead to breakages. That's why liability insurance is important. An existing policy should be reviewed or a new one taken out. If you already have family coverage, the child is included.

Household contents insurance

- As the family grows, new acquisitions are often necessary. It is therefore advisable to take out household contents insurance or to raise the coverage under an existing policy to reflect the increased value of the household contents and avoid becoming underinsured.

Valuables insurance

- Whether it's the valuable pearl necklace from mom, dad's expensive wristwatch, or the unique picture on the wall: Nothing is safe in children's hands, including valuables. Things can easily get lost or damaged. Personal valuables should therefore be insured.

Travel insurance

- Unexpected change of travel plans because the child is sick? With comprehensive travel protection, in particular cancellation cost insurance, you can save yourself a lot of stress and avoid financial losses.
