

Life partnership – no notification required

Previously, couples living together had to notify their pension fund if they wanted to provide their partner with a pension in the event of death. This advance notification is no longer necessary for collective foundations managed by AXA. The current pension fund regulations do not require notification. For this reason, the “Confirmation of civil partnership” notification form has been removed. Whether the partner is entitled to draw pension benefits is only assessed at the time of the insured’s death. You will find further information on life partnerships in the pension regulations.
